Just before the Emperor's demise a Minis terial council was held and various important affairs of state hurriedly discussed. Prince Bismarck presided, and was much affected by the terrible pathos of the scene.

The funeral services will be more simple than those which took place over the body of Emperor William, but they will be none the less impressive, as Emperor Frederick was loved by every one of his subjects.

LONDON'S SYMPATHY.

Queen Victoria Sends a Message of Con-

LONDON, June 15 .- London joins with Berlin in its mourning for the late Emperor.

Many messages of sympathy have been sent to the royal Prussian family.

Queen Victoria, directly after the receipt of the sad intelligence, telegraphed an expression of condolence and sorrow to Dowager Empress Victoris.

The Prince of Wales, who immediately returned from the Ascot Heath upon being informed of the Emperor's approaching and, will probably start for Berlin to-night.

The flags on the American and other legations are at half-mast in consequence of the death of Emperor Frederick.

The beils of Westminster Abbey were tolled this afternoon. The Prince of Wales will start for Berlin to-morrow evening.

In an interview this morning Mr. Henry Bischoff, sr., the banker, in this city, said : "I don't think the death of Emperor Frederick will create a panie in any way.

Frederick will create a panic in any way. The financial affairs of the Empire will become steadier, and Bismarck will the Germany over the crisis. This will tend to make the Chancellor more popular among all classes of society.

'I don't think there will be any trouble with the liberal classes. This uprising of Anarchists is all talk, nothing more. Of Course, there will always be discontent among these people, and they will never be reconciled to any Emperor."

The Emperor's Career.

Frederick William Nicolas Charles, King of Prussia and Emperor of Germany, was the eldest son of the late Emperor William, sucseeding him on March 9. He was born at ceeding him on March 9. He was born at Potsdam, Oct. 18. 1831, and, entering the army, he attained the rank of General.

War broke out between Prussia and Anstria in 1886. Major Gen, von Blumenthal was then Chief of Staff. The Crown Prince, during this war, led 125,000 men from Silesia through the passes of the Sudetic Hills—a feat attended with great difficulties and considerable dangers. By the brilliant general-ship of the Prince the army forced its way through the mountains and successfully fought battles at Trautenan. Nachod, Skalitz and Schweinscadel.

and Schweinscadel.

While he was attempting to unite his army with that of Prince Frederick Charles, the force of the latter was attacked by Gen. Benedek, which action resulted in the battle of Sadowa (July 8, 1866). In the midst of the battle, unexpected by the Austrians, the Grown Prince and his army appeared on the field and striking the important point of the Austrian position carried that vantage ground and decided the fortunes of the day. His march from Miletin to Kör grätz and his series of victories on entering Bohemia won for him deserved reputation as an ener-getic commander.

won for him deserved reputation as an energetic commander.

He took a prominent part in the war between France and Germany. In the latter part of 1870 he was on the Rhine frontier and commanding the Third German Army, a force consisting of 200,000 men and 500 guns. On the 4th of August he made a vigorous attack upon that position held at Weissenburg by a portion of Gen. MacMahon's army, commanded by Abel Douay. The French were forced back and dispersed. Two days later the Crown Prince followed up his victory of the 4th by attacking the united army corps of Gens. MacMahon, Failly and Canrobert, drawn up at Woerth in a strong defensive position along the slopes of the Vosges.

fensive position along the slopes of the Vosges.

In spite of MacMahon's desperate cavalry onslaughts victory perched on the German arms. At the memorable battle fought near Sedan the extremely difficult operation of crossing the River Msuse was carried out under the Crown Prince's direct orders. Henext made his way towards Paris, entered Versailles on the 20th of September, threw additional troops around the capital and remained near the invested city until the conclusion of peace. On Oct. 28 he was made Field Marshal of Prussia, and Nov. 8 a Russian Field Marshal.

In 1878, when the Emperor had been wounded by the assassin Nobeling the Crown Prince was appointed Regent until his father's recovery.

On Let 25 1888 he married Victorie Ade.

Prince was appointed Regent until his father's recovery.
On Jan. 25, 1858, he married Victoria Adelaide, Princess Royal of Great Britain, by whom he had seven children—Frederick William Victor Albert, born Jan. 27, 1859 (commonly called Prince William); Victoria Elizabeth Augusta Charlotts, born July 24, 1860; Albert William Henry, born Aug. 20, 1862; Frederica Amelia Wilhelmina Victoria, born April 12, 1866; Joschim Frederick Ernest Waldemar, born Feb. 10, 1868; Sophia Dorothy Ulrica Alice, born June 14, 1870, and Margaret Beatrix Feodore, born April 22, 1872.

Margaret Beatrix Feodore, born April 22, 1872.

Unlike his father, the Emperor, and Bismarck, the Crown Prince was not a believer in a large standing army, nor did he hope for the flual overthrow of France, preferring that the contest with that country should be carried on by means of the arts, industries and sciences rather than by force of arms. In his family relations he was a loving and respected husband and a kind and indulgent father. His personal dislike of Prince Bismarck dated from the time of his marriage, when Bismarck openly declared that an English wife could bring nothing but bad blood to the German blood royal.

In person the Crown Prince was an exceptionally distinguished-looking mau. He wore a full beard, which, during the latter part of his life, had turned from brown to gray; his face was purely German in type; massive head, light eyes, square jaw and a rather large mouth characterizing him. In his youth he was slight and described as sickly, but he grew to a tall, stalwart manhood.

sickly, but he grew to a tall, stalwart manhood.

Frederick III, was in an almost dying condition at the time he succeeded his father, and, although conflicting reports of his improvement have appeared since them, there was never any chance of his recovery.

He was much interested in the love match between his daughter, the Princess Victoria, and Prince Alexander, of Battenberg, and the opposition of Prince Bismarck caused him much worriment.

The death of Emperor Frederick and the succession of his son William to the throme will doubtless remove Bismarck's opposition to the marriage, as the political significance of such a union has been greatly diminished.

GERMANY'S TRIED EMPEROR.

A Warm Friend of Prince Bismarck and an Enemy of France.

Frederick William Albert Victor (commonly known as Prince William) succeeds mony known as Frince William) succeeds his father as Emperor of Germany and King of Prussia. He was born on Jan. 27, 1859, and is now in his thirtieth year. He is six feet in height, finely formed, has an oval face, with clearly cut features, high cheek bones and a yellowish mustache.

He is a very warlike young man and, unlike his father, is a warm friend of Prince like his father, is a warm friend of Prince Bismarck. He is extremely anti-French and is directly opposed to his mother, who repre-sents the English element in Germany, on one occasion refusing to give her his arm in public. His prejudice to foreign things is well illustrated by his refusing at a dinner to drink champagne because it was not made in Germany.

Germany.

Prince William is not destined to long life either. He suffers of otitis media purulenta, a disorder likely to develop into a fatal malady, and in all cases a symptom of general ill health. It was the same disease that first rendered the late King William Henry IV. of Prussia insane and finally caused his death.

WHAT TO DO AT CHICAGO.

THE QUESTION THAT AGITATES THE DE-PARTING DELEGATES.

They Are of All Onlaine and Fellowing from Blaine-or-Bust to the Darkest of Tenms-An Entire Lack of Unity Among the Republican Party Representatives-The Harvest in Doubt

In a desultory sort of fashion the Republi can delegates and politicians are getting away to the Chicago Convention.

There is nothing like the unity of action that characterized the departure of the Democratic cohorts for St. Louis, and, if report be true, they are not actuated by the same unity of purpose.

They are all at sea for a candidate. There are the Blaine-or-busters, the Harrison and Phelps supporters, a few Alger and Sherman shouters and a great number of short-horse players.

Among these latter is Shed Shook, of the Eleventh District, who leaves at 5.30 to-night in special cars over the Pennsylvania Rail-road.

The fragrance of two score bouttonnieres permeated the atmosphere of Part II of the Court of General Sessions to-day, when John D. Townsend, with Mme, Diss Debar's fan for a pointer, began his intellectual diagram of the unique defence which he has aid down to the charge of conspiracy against madame and her gray "General."

Psycho-land. Every juryman, every court officer, every reporter, madame and Mr. Townsend blossomed out.

Mr. Townsend declared that the question was whether Luther R. Marsh had a right to invite whom he liked to his house and a right to do with his own as he liked. He could show to the jury beyond question that madame was a medium of remarkable power.

Mrs. A. T. Stewart spent more than $1,000,000 on a church on Long Island, and no one had accused her of being insane, nor prosecuted anybody for advising her. And Marsh says no one advised him. He did as he liked.

And the second juror nodded approval vigorously.

'I have the greatest desire to do for this persecuted lady because Mr. Marsh asks me to do for her. She found his house nothing, as Mr. Marsh's nephew has told you, and made it a home. He believed her a great, faithful, devoted, Christian woman."

Citoyen Train grew excited during Mr. Townsend's speech. His feelings found yent for the most part in much scribbling of Psycho rhymes with blue and red pencils, but ocasionally he emitted ejaculations of emotion.

The plea was concluded with an appeal in behalf of "This woman who sacrificed everything to go to Mr. Marsh's desolated home and make it bright and cheerful, and to minister to him."

Inspector Seery, of the Bureau of Combustibles, visited the gas works, and in an adjacent yard he found a number of barrels marked "naphtha." The officials declared the contents to be only Lima oil, for which, on account of its cheapness, any second-hand barrels were used.

Pursuing his investigations, the Inspector found several small tanks full of this Lima oil, which was being pumped out as required by the company.

The Inspector did not stop to verify the statement that only Lima oil was in the naphtha barrels, for the Fire Department expressly forbade the storing of any kind of oil in that neighborhood, and the monopolists were coolly disobeying the order.

Mr. Seery returned to his office, where he wrote to the Standard Gaslight Company, ordering them to remove all the Lima oil, or naphtha, within two days from the receipt of the notice.

Having heard that the monopolists were about to bring suit against the Commissioners to compel them to grant the permission to endanger public life and property, an Evening Would reporter called upon Mr. Seery this morning to verify the rumor.

"I don't know anything about the Standard Gaslight Company bringing suit," said he, "but I do know that I will recommend the Commissioners to bring suit against the company for violation of the law if they don't stop storing oil in their works.

"I am going to put a stop to it at once," concluded Mr. Seery, emphatically.

The Inspector will visit the works again on Saturday to see if his order has been complied with.
